Supplementary Information

Systems using Thermo CRS products should be evaluated for compliance with local standards for specific application compatibility.

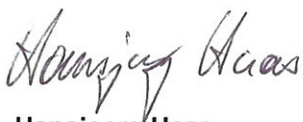

The "Safe Use of the System" chapter in the user's guide provides information to protect the operator against injury. This must be consulted before using the product.

The MoverLink is designed for connecting Dim4 Peripherals to a PC via RS-232 or USB in laboratory applications. For applications where the MoverLink is controlling a mover that is handling volatile, bio-hazardous, or radioactive samples is required, the end-user must carry out a risk assessment to determine what further measures may be required to protect the operator from injury. Examples of other measures may include adding a fume hood, the use of Personal Protective Equipment (PPE – gloves, coats, breathing apparatus, etc.).
